PREFACE

Pakistan was born on 14th August 1947, and we inherited a struggling publishing industry from undivided India. There were however some already established and enterprising institutions and overcoming the problems peculiar to a nascent society by early fifties, it gained strength as the years went by. One important aspect neglected, however, was the systematic bibliographical documentation of the published mass. It was in 1961 that Unesco motivated the compilation of a national bibliography at the instance of Dr. Akhtar Husain Raipuri, who headed Unesco's Regional Centre for Reading Materials in South Asia. To collect and record information on the output of the preceding fourteen years was no mean task, but an energetic group of bibliographers took it up with missionary zeal and compiled a 'retrospetive' national bibliography as best as was possible under the circumstances. The manuscript was prepared and delivered to Unesco a little later than the stipulated deadline, but its production in publication form could not be taken up by the Group who compiled it, or by any other organization, as it required substantially large outlay. National Book Centre of Pakistan, realizing that the amount of labour that had gone into the work should not go waste, offered to publish it fascicule by fascicule after due revision of the manuscript. The Group could not resist the temptation of incorporating the material that escaped its notice in the original compilation process, and this required a lot of rechecking and rearrangement. The Group then was short of personnel who could give adequate time to the work. The publication thus was delayed by several years during which the National Book Centre and the prospective subscribers became very uneasy.

There have been other pitfalls beyond the control of the compilers or publishers. The press in which the printed forms of the bibliography and its paper were lying was closed and then liquidated due to industrial unrest. We had to start all over again. I must compliment my own staff, especially Mr. Ibrahim Saad and Mr. S.M. Naqvi, who bore with me during the exasperating process, and it is as much due to their perseverance as to the conscientiousness of Mr. A.R. Ghani and his colleagues that this compilation has seen the light of the day. The first fascicule will be followed, it is hoped, in quick succession by other instalments of the work.

The thread has been taken up from 1962 onwards by the National Bibliographical Unit of the Department of Archives and Libraries which has already published some volumes.

We thank the Ministry of Education, Government of Pakistan, for the encouragement and the resources we received from them and without which the monumental task of producing this retrospective bibliography could not be undertaken.

Fascicule II

The 2nd Fascicule took more time than was expected in spite of our best efforts. It is, however, now in our hands, and the 3rd Fascicule will complete the work.

Happily, the work has now been regulated with the co-operation of the compilers, especially Mr. Gulistan Khan and the Printers, Pakistan Herald Press. We hope to publish the concluding Fascicule within this year.
